Fall 5K a Success

by Winda Collins

Saturday, Sept. 24, was cool, breezy and mostly sunny – a perfect day to participate in the Mish ko swen Fall 5K! The Rec Center was home base for the 70+ community members who came out to run, walk, push a stroller or carry young ones across the finish line.

The brainchild of the Community Health department, this marks the 7th year of the Mish ko swen 5K, which is held twice a year: June and September. The event is open to FCP tribal members and their families, and FCP employees.

Not only is this an opportunity to get up and get out for some fresh air and exercise, it’s an opportunity to raise awareness and learn. Information was made available to those in attendance on such topics as: Infant Safe Sleep, Childhood Obesity Prevention, More Matters: Fruits and Vegetables, Head Lice, Breast Cancer, Emergency Preparedness and Suicide Prevention.

Gregg Tallier, DJ of choice, was on-hand to emcee, play music, and to keep things moving along. He came in handy several times as the route of the 5K was changed at the last minute, which caused a bit of confusion!

Runners and walkers were given the opportunity to have themselves timed. First male to finish was Ira Frank with a time of 24.26. First female to finish was Celine Kegley at 29.47. Kudos to all who participated – no matter the time!

A delicious, healthy lunch of wraps, fresh fruit and vegetables was served and prize drawings were held afterwards.

Many thanks to Community Health and all the volunteers who did a great job of planning and running the event.

Rev-up MKE Final Live Pitch Event

Over the past few months, PBDC partnered with Harley Davidson, Marquette University, Near West Side Partners, Wave Stone Bank and Mueller Communications, among others, for a “Shark Tank-style” business competition in Milwaukee, called Rev-Up MKE. Eight finalists made their live pitches to a panel of judges and the public during an event that took place at The Rave on Tuesday, Sept. 27.

The grand prize winner was “Pete’s Pops”, a local Milwaukee company that offers fresh fruit and cream popsicles in unique flavor combinations. They were awarded $10,000 in start-up funds as well as a storefront in the Near West Side and numerous in-kind services.

“Funky Fresh Spring Rolls”, a mobile food vendor manufacturer offering unique spring rolls in non-traditional flavored rolls, made with fresh, local ingredients, was named as the runner-up. This team was awarded $4,000 in start-up funds, with an additional $1,000 to support company growth.

The third-place winner “WasteCap Resource Solutions Milwaukee Community Service Corp.” are two local nonprofits that teamed up to build custom furniture from salvaged materials in foreclosed homes throughout Milwaukee. They were awarded $2,000 to expand business operations.

Near West Side Partners, along with PBDC and its other anchor institutions, plan to make this small business competition an annual event and intend to make a few changes after this inaugural competition. As part of next year’s competition, it’s been discussed that Near West Side Partners’ anchor institutions - PBDC, Harley Davidson, Marquette University, Miller-Coors, and Aurora Health Care - will have more involvement with the finalists. Each anchor will work with a start-up company to help mentor them throughout the process leading up to the final live pitch event.

“We’re very happy with the outcome of the first Rev-Up MKE competition, and we look forward to next year’s event!

Greenfire Open House Event

Greenfire Management Services hosted an open house event in its newly renovated space on Tuesday, Sept. 20. The celebration featured appetizers, drinks, and door prizes. Over 100 business colleagues joined us to celebrate the expansion of their space, their team, and their future.

“What a fantastic open house event,” said Kip Ritchie, President of Greenfire Management Services. “We are thankful for the support of the Forest County Potawatomi Community leadership and the Potawatomi Business Development Corporation. We’re looking forward to growing Greenfire for many years and grateful to have this new space.”

DHS Issues Public Health Advisory on Opioid Crisis
submitted by Department of Health Services

MADISON, Wis. (Sept. 27, 2016) - The Wisconsin Department of Health Services’ (DHS) State Health Officer has issued a Public Health Advisory, in response to the use and abuse of opioids, including heroin and prescription painkillers.

“Wisconsin has taken great strides in recent years to address the escalating problems relating to the misuse of opioids, but there is much more work to be done,” said DHS Secretary Linda Seemeyer. “Our data shows opioid addiction is a public health crisis that is destroying lives and families across the state, and we will continue our commitment to reversing the trend and ending this epidemic.”

State Health Officer Karen McKeown notified local health departments of the Public Health Advisory on Sept. 23. “This Advisory is another tool in our multi-faceted approach to addressing this crisis,” McKeown said. “We look forward to working with all of our partners to address this crisis and improve the health and safety of all Wisconsinites.”

Opioid abuse has been identified as a top priority in the State Health Improvement Plan. Additionally, DHS has been promoting opioid misuse prevention and treatment services, and recently announced the signing of a standing order to allow pharmacies to dispense naloxone, which reverses the effects of an overdose, without a prescription.

State of Wisconsin Department of Health Services PUBLIC HEALTH ADVISORY

On Sept. 22, 2016, Governor Walker issued Executive Order #214 as a next step to recognize the growing opioid crisis and to call on the State Health Officer to issue an advisory bringing additional attention to the serious public health problem that has been created by the escalating opioid epidemic. We thank Governor Walker for creating a Task Force on Opioid Abuse to bring this critical issue to light.

This health advisory is being issued by the State Health Officer to inform the public of the alarming statistics of the current opioid epidemic in Wisconsin. The number of Wisconsin citizens who die as a result of drug overdose deaths in 2014, 622, more than tripled in Wisconsin from 194 deaths in 2003 to 622 deaths in 2014. They are now a leading cause of injury deaths in Wisconsin. Prescription opioid pain relievers such as oxycodone, hydrocodone, and methadone contributed to about one-half of the total drug overdose deaths, and heroin contributes to about one-third.

Opioid abuse and drug overdoses have a devastating impact on individuals, families, and communities in our state. Wisconsin must acknowledge this impact and work together to address this public health epidemic.

The Department of Health Services and our partners recently used the Wisconsin Health Improvement Planning Process to identify health priorities for the state. Opioid abuse has been identified as one of these priorities. More information, including how you can get involved, can be found at www.dhs.wisconsin.gov/hw2020/wihipp.htm.

In an effort to reduce death and disability from opioid abuse, Wisconsin is striving to:

• Improve the way opioids are prescribed to reduce exposure to opioids, prevent abuse, and stop addiction by implementing and strengthening strategies that help prevent high-risk prescribing and prevent opioid overdose.
• Promote the use of the prescription drug monitoring program, which gives health care providers information to improve patient safety and prevent abuse.
• Expand access and use of naloxone - a safe antidote to reverse opioid overdose.
• Expand access to evidence-based substance abuse treatment, such as medication-assisted treatment, for people already struggling with opioid addiction.
• Continue to enhance collaboration with other state and local agencies, health care providers, and other partners to develop strategies to reduce the devastation of opioid abuse.

This is a complicated problem which requires a cooperative effort of partners, organizations, and communities. Many are already working on efforts to combat this crisis, and we now ask for redoubled efforts and increased coordination. We are all in this together.

The rally was held in the steps of the Andrew W. Mellon Auditorium and was organized by the Indigenous Environmental Network with support from non-native allies. Supporters carried banners and signs reading “Resist Dakota Access Pipeline” and “We Stand With Standing Rock Sioux” while several Native leaders addressed the crowd.

“We are fighting an entire system predicated upon the disregard and suppression of Indigenous rights, and Dakota Access is yet another example of that system in play,” said Dallas Goldtooth, National Organizer with the Indigenous Environmental Network. “On behalf of our rights and the sanctity of Mother Earth we must keep fossil fuels in the ground - we must and will stop the Dakota Access pipeline.”

Speakers at the rally included Standing Rock Sioux Tribal Chairman Dave Archambault II; Dallas Goldtooth of the Indigenous Environmental Network; Grace Claymore, Standing Rock youth representative; Brian Cladoosby, president of the National Congress of American Indians; Heather Wood-Mendoza, Lakota Native Rights activist; and Lloyd Pilok, tribal vice president from the Native village of Point Lay, Alaska.

Earlier, President Obama spoke about the Standing Rock Sioux during his remarks at the Tribal Nations Conference, saying, “I know of many of you have come together, across tribes and across the country, to support the community at Standing Rock and together you’re making your voices heard.” On Sept. 9, following a court decision in favor of the pipeline, the Department of Justice, the Department of the Interior, and the Department of the Army issued a joint statement that temporarily stopped construction on one area of the pipeline pending further review and consultation with tribes.

“The Corps of Engineer’s failure to hold meaningful consultation with our tribe before approving construction of the Dakota Access Pipeline is a violation of our rights,” stated Dave Archambault Jr., chairman of the Standing Rock Sioux tribe. “The Obama Administration has been an ally of the tribes and we appreciate that he will ask federal agencies to consider treaty rights in making decisions regarding natural resource projects. We hope that President Obama’s direction to federal agencies is a turning point for more meaningful government-to-government consultation.”

Over 200 tribes have now joined the Standing Rock Sioux in the fight against the pipeline, and reports from the ground say that there are over 4,000 people at the camp. With the fate of this pipeline now in President Obama’s hands, tribal leaders and allies across the nation are urging him to challenge the fossil fuel industry’s greed and stop the project permanently.

United Nations Experts Validate Opposition to Dakota Access Pipeline submitted by Indigenous Environmental Network

The pipeline also directly endangers traditional life ways and practices, and the health and well-being of current and future generations. Members of the Standing Rock Sioux and thousands of allies from across the United States and the world have been taking direct action since April 2016 to call attention to the violation of their Indigenous rights, desecration of their lands and waters and the threat to our global climate engendered by the Dakota Access Pipeline.

The 1,172-mile pipeline, being pushed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Energy Transfer LLC Corporation, is proposed to pass under the Missouri River and Lake Oahe, a vital source of the tribe’s drinking water and ceremonial practice.

“Envisioned to be the ‘front line of the climate change movement,’ the Standing Rock Sioux and their allies have demonstrated that they are willing to stand up to the threats posed by the Dakota Access Pipeline. The EU cannot stand by and allow this form of environmental destruction to go unchallenged,” said Tauli-Corpuz.

The UN “calls on the United States government to take action to halt the pipeline.” The statement was echoed by indigenous rights advocates.

States government to take action to halt the pipeline was endorsed by other United Nations Experts, including: • Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders, Michel Forst • Special Rapporteur on the human right to safe drinking water and sanitation, Léo Heller • Special Rapporteur on human rights and the environment, John H. Knox • Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association, Maina Kiai • Special Rapporteur on cultural rights, Karima Bennoune • UN Special Rapporteur on human rights and hazardous substances and wastes, Baskut Tuncak • Current Chairperson of the Working Group on business and human rights, Pavel Sulyandziga

The 1,172-mile pipeline, being pushed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Energy Transfer LLC Corporation, is proposed to pass under the Missouri River and Lake Oahe, a vital source of the tribe’s drinking water and ceremonial practice. In her statement, Tauli-Corpuz drew attention to blatant violation of treaty rights, the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous peoples and other international legal standards requiring the free, prior and informed consent of Indigenous peoples before the approval of any project affecting their lands.

She called for immediate attention to the ongoing persecution, intimidation and harassment of the many protectors gathered on the ground in Standing Rock to directly oppose the pipeline and present alternative visions for a just and healthy world.

Tauli-Corpuz’s call for the United Nations, Standing Rock Sioux Chairman David Archambault II invited Tauli-Corpuz to visit Standing Rock and witness for herself the escalating violations against Indigenous peoples and the land and water of the region.

“The UN Expert got it right,” said Tom Goldtooth, the Director of the Indigenous Environmental Network.

“What the U.S. calls consultation is not consultation but a statement telling people what they’re doing after millions of dollars have been invested, painting Indigenous peoples as spoilers. The right of free, prior and informed consent begins prior to the planning process, not when their bulldozers are at your doorstep.”

The CNAY Welcomes Young Leaders to D.C. submitted by Center for Native American Youth

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept. 26, 2016) — The Center for Native American Youth (CNAY) at the Aspen Institute welcomed a group of approximately 100 Native American youth to Washington, D.C., for the eighth annual White House Tribal Youth Gathering to share his priorities to Native youth and Indian Country.

“Every day, Native youth are at your doorstep,” said Hamilton Seymour, a 17-year-old Gen-I Youth Ambassador and 2015 CNAY Champion for Change from the Nooksack Indian Tribe, attended the conference and Tribal Youth Gathering to share his priorities for Native youth and Indian Country. “There are many challenges and difficulties facing youth across Indian Country,” says Hamilton. “And these events provide an important opportunity for the Administration to hear about those, in addition to the incredible strengths and resiliency that we possess as Native people.”

The Youth Delegates are part of the Generation Indigenous initiative (Gen-I), which is a broad initiative which takes a comprehensive, culturally appropriate approach to help improve the lives and opportunities for Native youth across sectors. CNAY leads the National Native Youth Network, a component of Gen-I, that provides a sustainable platform to engage Native youth and provide them education, leadership, and funding opportunities. The Youth Delegates are all engaged as Gen-I Ambassadors and have led positive change through community service projects addressing issues from suicide to education to climate change.

“We are very excited and pleased that the Administration continues to extend these opportunities to Native youth,” said Senator Byron Dorgan, founder of CNAY. “They all have powerful, inspiring stories to share and we will continue to uplift them as part of our work at CNAY.”

Center for Native American Youth is dedicated to improving the health, safety and overall well-being of Native American youth through communication, policy development and advocacy. Founded by former United States Senator Byron Dorgan in February 2011, CNAY is a policy program within the Aspen Institute, headquartered in Washington, D.C. CNAY works to strengthen and create new connections as well as exchange resources and best practices that address the challenges facing Native youth, with a special emphasis on suicide prevention. Visit CNAY’s website for a comprehensive list of resources available to young Native Americans, tribes and the general public. For more information, visit www.cnay.org.

President Signs NATIVE Act
submitted by Rachel Cromer, AIANTA
WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept. 26, 2016) – President Barack Obama signed S. 1579, the Native American Tourism and Improving Visitor Experience (NATIVE) Act Friday. The Act requires the Department of Commerce, the Interior, and other federal agencies with recreational travel or tourism functions to update their management plans and tourism initiatives to include Indian tribes, tribal organizations, and Native Hawaiian organizations.

Sherry L. Rupert, American Indian and Alaska Native Tourism Association (AIANTA) board president, said, “This is an incredibly important day for Indian Country tourism, the beginning of an important collaboration between the federal, tribal and non-profit sectors to strengthen and grow cultural heritage tourism in the United States. We thank the President for signing the bill, and Senators Brian Schatz (D-Hawaii) and John Thune (R-South Dakota) and Representative Markwayne Mullin (R-Oklahoma) for shepherding the legislation through Congress.”

Tourism in the United States and in Indian Country is one of the largest and fastest growing sectors of economic development and job creation. International tourism to Indian Country grew 181 percent from 2007 to 2015, resulting in $8.6 billion in direct spending, according to U.S. Department of Commerce figures.

“This law will empower native communities to tell their own stories and build their own economic opportunities, said Senator Brian Schatz. “Visitors are increasingly seeking out a more authentic and historically-rich travel experience, and there is nothing more authentic and unique than the cultural tourism experience our native communities provide.”

“This is a good, common-sense bill that will have a real impact in tribal communities throughout the country, including the Lakota, Dakota, and Nakota nations in South Dakota,” said Senator John Thune.

The NATIVE Act will require federal agencies with tourism assets and responsibilities to include tribes and native organizations in national tourism efforts and strategic planning. It will also provide American Indian, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian communities with access to resources and technical assistance needed to build sustainable recreational and cultural travel and tourism infrastructure and capacity in order to spur economic development and create good jobs.

Supporters of the legislation included U.S. Travel Association, American Indian and Alaska Native Tourism Association, Southwest Tourism Policy Council, National Congress of American Indians, Alaska Federation of Natives, and the Native Enterprise Initiative of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Tribal Leaders to Participate in Formal Consultations
submitted by USDJO - Office of Public Affairs
WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept. 26, 2016) – The U.S. Departments of Justice, of the Army, and of the Interior invited representatives from all 567 federally recognized tribes to participate in formal, government-to-government consultations on how federal decision-making on infrastructure projects can better allow for timely and meaningful tribal input. Starting with a listening session on Oct. 11, formal tribal consultations were scheduled in six regions of the country, from Oct. 25 through Nov. 21. The deadline for written input will be Nov. 30.

The three departments previously announced on Sept. 9, the intention to hold these consultation sessions after important issues were raised by the Standing Rock Sioux tribe and other tribal nations and their members regarding the Dakota Access pipeline specifically and pipeline-related decisions-making more generally.

The consultations will focus on how the federal government can better ensure meaningful tribal input into infrastructure-related decisions and the protection of tribal lands, resources and treaty rights and will also explore with tribes whether new legislation should be proposed to Congress to alter the current statutory framework to promote those goals.

Millions Awarded to Law Enforcement Body-Worn Camera Programs
submitted by USDJO Office of Public Affairs
WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept. 26, 2016) – Attorney General Loretta E. Lynch announced awards totaling over $20 million to 106 state, city, tribal and municipal law enforcement agencies to establish and enhance law enforcement body-worn camera programs across the United States.

The awards, funded under the Office of Justice Programs’ Bureau of Justice Assistance’s (BJA) Fiscal Year 2016 Body-Worn Camera Policy and Implementation Program, will help law enforcement agencies implement body-worn camera policies, practices and evaluation methods to make a positive impact on the quality of policing in individual communities. Under this grant announcement, BJA awarded more than $16 million to state, local, and tribal law enforcement agencies, as well as a $3 million supplemental award to continue support for body-worn camera training and technical assistance. An additional $474,000 was awarded earlier this year under the 2016 Small Agency Body-Worn Camera Policy and Implementation Program.

As we strive to support local leaders and law enforcement officials in their work to protect their communities, we are mindful that effective public safety requires more than arrests and prosecutions,” said Attorney General Lynch. “It also requires winning – and keeping – the trust and confidence of the citizens we serve. These grants will help more than 100 law enforcement agencies promote transparency and ensure accountability, clearing the way for the closer cooperation between residents and officers that is so vital to public safety.”

Today’s awardees include law enforcement agencies located in the following 32 states and Puerto Rico: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, Florida, California, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Nevada, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. Tribal awardees include: Pokagon Band of Potawatomi Indians, the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians and the Nottawaseppi Huron Band of the Potawatomi.

For additional information about this grant program, visit http://go.usa.gov/xKpFl.
WASHINGTON, D.C., (Sept. 26, 2016) – Attorney General Loretta E. Lynch and Secretary of the Interior Sally Jewell announced that, as the result of an initiative begun in the summer of this year, the United States has settled with 41 federal-tribal-state agreements. The results resolve disputes over various uses, including housing, timber harvesting, farming, grazing, oil and gas extraction, business leasing, rights-of-way and easements. Interior also manages about 2,500 tribal trust accounts for more than 250 tribes.

Under the negotiated settlement agreements, litigation will end regarding the Department of the Interior’s accounting and management of the tribes’ trust accounts, trust lands and other natural resources. With monies from the congressionally-appropriated Judgment Fund, which is used to pay settlements or final judgments against the government, the United States will compensate the tribes for their breach of trust claims and the tribes will waive, release and dismiss their claims with prejudice. The parties have agreed to information-sharing procedures that will strengthen the management of trust assets and improve communications between the settling tribes and the Department of the Interior. The settlement agreements also include dispute resolution provisions to reduce the likelihood of future litigation.

Trust Accounting and Management Lawsuit Settlements Announced

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept., 26, 2016) – At the 8th Tribes Nations Conference hosted by President Barack Obama, Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack underscored the Administration’s support for tribal communities with $9 million in new funds to support community development and education. Since 2009, under Vilsack, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has invested more than $3 billion in economic development efforts for Native Americans.

“Since day one of this Administration, USDA has been committed to a Department that works side by side with tribal governments and individual American Indians and Alaska Natives,” said Vilsack. “We have expanded investment in Native and tribal community businesses, education, food security, housing, health care and infrastructure. This announcement continues our efforts to promote economic development and job creation in tribal communities for years to come.”

Earlier, President Obama kicked off the 2016 White House Tribal Nations Conference at the Andrew W. Mellon Auditorium. This event provides tribal leaders from the 567 federally-recognized tribes with the opportunity to interact directly with high-level federal government officials and members of the White House Council on Native American Affairs. Each federally-recognized tribe is invited to send one representative to the conference. This year’s conference builds upon the President’s commitment to strengthen the government-to-government relationship with Indian Country and to improve the lives of American Indians and Alaska Natives.

At the event, Vilsack made three significant funding announcements:

• $3.8 million in grants for 28 projects that will help tribal communities and businesses in 15 states. USDA is providing the funding through the Rural Business Development Grant (RBDBG) program. The grants can be used for technical assistance, training and other activities to help develop or expand small and emerging businesses in rural areas.

• $2.3 million in grants to 13 tribal organizations for agricultural and conservation training, outreach and technical assistance in 15 states. The grants are part of USDA’s Outreach and Assistance for Socially Disadvantaged and Veteran Farmers and Ranchers Program, known as the 2501 Program. The grantees will leverage USDA funds along with partner funding, and serve tribal groups in Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, and Wisconsin.

• $2.9 million in grants to help 20 tribal colleges make equipment, infrastructure, facilities and educational improvements. The grants will be provided through USDA’s Tribal College Initiative Grant program, which supports tribal land grant colleges and universities. The program is an important source of funding for higher education in Native American communities. In 2011 and 2013, USDA Rural Development awarded Nebraska Indian Community College two grants totaling $280,000 to build a classroom and training facility for construction and vehicle maintenance. The new, 4,000-square-foot facility is large enough to provide hands-on training.

In conjunction with the funding announcements, U.S. government partners, including USDA, signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) affirming the U.S. government’s commitment to protect tribal treaty rights and similar rights relating to natural resources through enhanced inter-agency coordination and collaboration. Additionally, another agreement was signed to extend an earlier MOU regarding Native American sacred sites.

Finally, in support of this gathering of tribal leaders, the USDA Forest Service published a new final rule in the Federal Register ensuring that federally-recognized Indian tribes have access to forest products for traditional and cultural purposes. For more information on this rule, please see the Federal Register notice.

USDA has significantly expanded its support for tribes and tribal communities since 2009, providing $3.1 billion in rural development programs and services, including $553 million to build or upgrade more than 300 tribal facilities and $55 million to support Native-owned businesses and economic development. To better coordinate and target USDA support for challenged areas, USDA launched the StrikeForce for Rural Growth and Opportunity initiative in 2010. Today, StrikeForce has invested more than $23.5 billion in 970 persistently-poor counties, parishes, boroughs, census and tribal areas across the nation. In support of education, USDA supports scholarships for students to attend Tribal Land-Grant Colleges and Universities, and provides additional funding to support research and extension in American Indian communities. For more information on Federal housing support programs in Indian country, go to: www.usda.gov/ots.

Secretary Vilsack has made it a priority to build a new era for civil rights at USDA and ensure that all customers and employees are treated fairly, and all Americans are treated with dignity and respect. Under Vilsack’s leadership, USDA announced the historic Keepsagle settlement agreement with Native American farmers who have faced discrimination by USDA in past decades. USDA established the Office of Advocacy and Outreach in 2010 to improve access to USDA programs and enhance the viability and profitability of small, beginning, and socially-disadvantaged farmers and ranchers. And to improve relations with Native American tribes, USDA named the first Senior Advisor on Tribal Relations in 2012.
